The attitudes about marijuana are changing. Fewer 8th and 10th graders believe smoking marijuana is dangerous. These declines in the perception of harm invariably precede increases in substance use. Today, more 10th and 12th grade students smoke marijuana than cigarettes. Several states have medical marijuana laws on the books and more states are considering putting these types of initiatives on the ballot. Coalitions need the latest information in order to effectively deal with this issue.

Hear how coalitions are getting their prevention message out as laws and attitudes change. Learn the best ways to educate the public about marijuana's harmful effects on the developing brain. Find out how coalitions are working with local and state governments on legislation and ordinances.

Key Concepts:

- Learn strategies to educate the public
- Gain new allies and strategies for community mobilization
- Find out how coalitions are working with governments on legislation and ordinances
