You can make a difference at the local, state and national level. Learn how to find your inner advocate and how coalitions can use the power they have to create positive change in their communities. Coalitions and the dedicated people who work with them have far-reaching influence in their communities. Working to change laws, regulations, ordinances, and policies is frequently involved. Policy change is often the fastest way to see population-level impacts and enhance drug-free environments for youth and families. Find out what coalitions can and can't do as far as advocacy and lobbying are concerned. See how changes to laws and policies can improve enforcement, reduce access and availability of alcohol, tobacco and other drugs, and increase social disapproval of drug use.

The first hour of this workshop includes viewing Understanding Your Influence Broadcast. The second hour of the workshop provides an opportunity for the attendees to discuss issues brought up in the broadcast, and share ideas about local concerns surrounding this topic.

Attendees must be present at the MISD for broadcast and discussion to receive substance abuse contact hours.
